

July 2018

Dear Friends,

Summer has arrived! So has kitten season! Rescue groups, shelters and SPCAs are always busy, but this time of year really stretches resources. They are at capacity and there are still so many more in need. The Wake County Animal Shelter took in 1,083 animals in June and are at capacity in July. We would like to give a special thanks to all those who work tirelessly to assist animals in need.

Spaying and neutering is the key solution to the animal overpopulation tragedy. This area is fortunate to have many low-cost spay/neuter options, but they still remain out of reach for many people. We assist people in the community who have found strays and are unable to get spay/neuter assistance through other options. Snowflake has some award-winning kittens, available soon for adoption. Meet Nobel, Emmy and Oscar. They are sure to fill your life with peace, laughter, entertainment and hopefully not too much drama!

Animal rescue is not an easy endeavor. It has joyful moments and disappointments, requires stamina and persistence and sometimes involves hard decisions. Some animals are not in good condition, physically or mentally, many with behavior or trust issues. They can't tell us where they've been or what they need. And of course, it requires many helping hands and financial support. It requires commitment. It is also very rewarding and fulfilling to see the transformation that occurs when an animal receives the love and care they deserve. Even after the large amount of resources available in this area, the number of stray and abandoned animals does not decrease enough. Some have asked, why do you do it? It doesn't make a big difference. And then I look into Alejandro's eyes and remember why we do it: Because it made a difference to this one!

Thank you for your previous commitment to Snowflake Rescue. We could not continue our mission without your generous donations. Please consider making a donation, volunteering, adopting or sponsoring a special needs animal. Visit our website at: www.snowflakerescue.org. We hope that you have a very safe and fun-filled summer!
